Brief personal background	Yan Schroën (1964, Kerkrade, the Netherlands) graduated in biochemistry and acupuncture in the Netherlands and studied Taoism and traditional Chinese medicine in the People's Republic of China. Since 1991 I have been working as an acupuncturist and herbalist in the Netherlands. Because of my interest in the relation between Chinese medicine and nonlinear dynamics I got involved in scientific research at the Sino-Dutch Research Centre for Preventive and Personalized Medicine at TNO (Netherlands Organisation for Applied Scientific Research). Since 2007 I work here as senior researcher and I participate as member of the scientific committee of the Sino-Dutch Centre for Preventive and Personalized Medicine. As a (guest)teacher I lecture Chinese medicine and systems biology at several schools and universities in Europe, USA and China In the last few years I published several articles on Chinese medicine, systems theory and systems biology in magazines like PlosOne, Journal of clinical rheumatology and recently in Science.
Title of the presentation	A preventive and personalized approach of health and wellness
